IRB: Institutional Review Board

Mission is to protect the rights, dignity, and welfare of all human subjects who participate in research programs at Lehigh University.

The IRB's authority extends to all human subjects research conducted using any property or facility of Lehigh University, and under the direction of any employee, student, faculty member, or agent of the University.
How Does the IRB Protect Human Subjects?

Before any research involving humans can begin, it must be fully reviewed and approved by the IRB

• Submit to the IRB for review:
  • Application (contains the details of your research and info on how you will protect participants)
  • Informed consent (participants are informed that they are participating in research and how you will protect them and the information they provide)
Things the IRB Will Need to Review

• Study materials (all surveys, questionnaires, interview questions, audio / video presentations, etc., being used)
• Ethics training (evidence of completion of an online course in protecting human research participants)

• If conducting research internationally and/or with non-English speaking Populations, also submit:
  • International Research Appendix
  • Translation Documentation Form (help verify the translation of documents to / from English)
Other Considerations

- Will your research involve participants who are under the age of 18?
- Special requirements for obtaining informed consent / assent
- Will participants be compensated for taking part in the study? (e.x. monetary payment, gift cards, other rewards)
- The IRB has specific guidelines for acceptable ways of compensating participants
Submitting to the IRB

The IRB recommends submitting applications at least six weeks in advance of the anticipated research start date.

The IRB receives a high volume of applications, and most need adjustments before they are considered review-ready.

Research with human subjects may not be conducted without the advanced approval of the IRB.
Resources

• Your advisor
  • Most familiar with the specific details and rationale for your study
  • Advisor will be listed as the principal investigator (PI) for any protocol submitted to the IRB
  • Advisor will need to sign protocol (as well as all revisions / modifications)

Reimbursement

In most cases, student awards for travel grants, research awards, and participation in conferences that enhance the student's educational and personal development, are classified as fellowships for tax purposes. IRS regulations do not require the University to report or withhold taxes on payment of fellowship awards to U.S. Citizens. However, the IRS does consider fellowships to be taxable income and reportable on personal income tax returns. Fellowships to students who are nonresident aliens are often subject to IRS tax reporting by the University and may be subject to federal income tax withholding. Depending on the student's visa status and the nature of the award, any required tax withholding will be applied at either 14% or 30%. Some students may qualify for a reduced tax rate based on certain exemptions and tax treaties. The Controller's Office will make the determination of required tax reporting and withholding based upon the information submitted on the Student Disbursement Form and the Foreign National Information Form.

All budgeted expenses must be in compliance with Lehigh University’s Travel and Business Expense Policy. Please read this policy carefully: https://financeadmin.lehigh.edu/content/travel-business-expense-policy-and-procedures-0
